CALL NOTES

Caller telephoned the customer care line to report a problem with what she described as “my heart tablets”. She stated that some of the tablets in the most recent pack “look wrong” — specifically that the colour is uneven across the tablet surface and that two or three tablets were chipped at the edge when she opened the blister.

The caller did not have the carton or blister to hand at the time of the call and was therefore unable to provide a batch number, an expiry date, or the product strength. She was not certain of the full product name and could not confirm which pharmacy dispensed it. She reported no adverse symptoms and confirmed she has not taken any of the affected tablets.

Advisor requested that the caller retain the affected pack and telephone back with the carton details so the complaint can be formally logged and investigated. Caller agreed. No product identification was possible during this call, and no quantity could be established.

Note: this record is intentionally incomplete. It cannot be triaged until product and batch identification are obtained.
